The U.S. NPGS will soon have a new GRIN-Global website

This is the appearance of the current website’s home page:

![Current Website Home Page]

This will be the appearance of the new website’s home page:

![New Website Home Page]
What are some of the key features and changes for the new GRIN-Global website?

- Enabling popups is important for complete functionality.
- Responsive design. The new website will dynamically adjust text and images based on the size and orientation of the screen being used to view it. Users will have a better experience on smaller screen devices such as tablet computers.
- Redesigned search approaches. The new website uses tabs for the different search types: Simple, List, Advanced. A Results tab displays the query results. As a default behavior, searches returning 500 or fewer accessions will include the accessions’ top image as thumbnails, for those accessions that have images.
- Revised tabular display for search results, with more column display and sort options. You will have more control over what types of data to display, and the display sorting within search results. For example, you will be able to hide unwanted columns from the results.
- Search filter within results. A new search filter embedded within the displayed results will refine your results by displaying only those records containing the additional search string in any of the displayed fields. This feature may be useful if your query, especially a Simple search, returns more results than anticipated.
- Visual cues that more data is available. If more data is available than displayed, an icon of a green circle containing a “+” is shown. Click on the circle to expand the data displayed.
- Scroll through multiple accession detail pages. You can scroll through multiple accession detail pages by selecting the accessions in the search results, then clicking on the View Accession Details button.
- Accession detail pages open in a new browser tab. If you click on an accession (e.g. PI number) in the search results, a new browser tab is opened for the details, reducing the need to toggle between the search results and accession detail display pages.
- Redesigned accession detail display. Tabs organize the detailed information associated with an accession: Summary, Passport, Taxonomy, Other, Pedigree, IPR, Observation. If no information is available in a topic area, the tab is greyed out and an icon (universal No symbol) is displayed when you hover over that tab.
- More information about regulations that impact distribution. If there are U.S. federal or state regulations that may impact the NPGS’s capability to ship an accession, an exclamation point (!) is shown beside the cart. The restrictions are described in the accession detail page. This does not prevent accessions from being requested, but rather is informational. This pertains to regulations that affect distributions within the U.S. only.
- Revised approaches for displaying images. You can hover over an image to preview the total number of images for that accession. When there are multiple image categories, there are separate buttons for each. Also, images can now be viewed at their maximum size in a separate display window.
- Some GRIN-Taxonomy pages will retain the current website’s display format. These will be revised in a future release.
Frequently Asked Questions

Why are you completely redesigning the GRIN-Global website?

The current site is five years old. It needed to be updated from both a technology and a features perspective. See the section on the previous page about some of the new features for more information.

Will my profile login and password carry over to the new website?

Yes. You will not need to change your login or password on the new site.

Will my order history carry over to the new website?

Yes.

Will I need to resubmit recent/pending germplasm requests made using the current website after the conversion to the new site is completed?

No. They will be processed by NPGS staff as usual.

When will the new website be available? How long will the site be inaccessible during the conversion?

The conversion date is currently scheduled for August 22, 2020. It will start on that Saturday morning (about 9:00 am U.S. Eastern time zone) to minimize disruption to users, and should take no more than eight hours.

Will the link/URL for U.S. NPGS GRIN-Global change?

No. You will still access GRIN-Global at https://npgsweb.ars-grin.gov/gringlobal/search.aspx after the conversion.

I am accustomed to the current site. What if I need help with the new site?

We think you will find navigating the new site even more intuitive than the current one. Feel free to explore it fully. There is also a help menu with information to assist you. If, after exhausting those approaches, you still need assistance, please use the “Contact Us” menu option.